Understanding the New IRS "Repair Regulations" - FREE Webinar

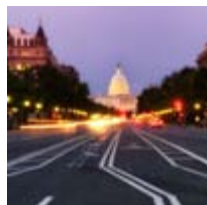

The decisions about whether to expense or capitalize a repair, renovation or upgrade to your property has become more complicated, due to new IRS "temporary" regulations. The recently issued regulations help define the determination on whether or not a repair, renovation, or upgrade may be expensed or if it must be capitalized and depreciated over a period of years. Let us help you understand these complex new regulations through a FREE webinar on Thursday, August 9th at 2PM EST. Click HERE to register today.

'Taxmageddon:' Plan for Potentially Higher Taxes Starting Next Year

In the past decade, Americans have enjoyed a number of taxpayer-friendly laws that have kept the rates on income, capital gains and dividends historically low. In addition, a number of other tax cuts have been put into effect. But all that is scheduled to change on January 1, 2013, when numerous tax provisions expire -- unless Congress acts. The result is being called Taxmageddon. What could it mean for your personal tax bill? This article details what is scheduled to happen and how you can prepare.

The Challenges of Administering Family and Medical Leave

The Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) requires companies to provide unpaid leave for certain family and medical reasons. However, many companies have difficulty administering the law because they must determine which absences qualify, when the leave begins, and ensure that a variety of other requirements are met. Here are two cases in which the courts ruled in favor of employers after staff members were denied FMLA leave.
